John Randolph and John Marshall.
Mr. Wood Bouldin, of Richmond, writes the following interesting letter to the editor of the Danville Times, to correct a reminiscence of John Randolph, which occurred in the "Randolphiana" of the editor:

"RICHMOND, VA., Sept. 12, 1871.
"In referring to the scene at Charlotte court-house, when there was an effort made to prevent Mr. Randolph from making his slaves pull fodder on Sunday, injustice has been done to that highly-respected and respectable tribunal, the county court of Charlotte.

It is a great mistake to say that that court was 'bullied' by Mr. Randolph, and induced to disregard its duty. In fact, the scene alluded to occurred not in the county court, but in the circuit court, and before Judge Leigh. It might well have been introduced in the notices of him, as illustrative of his firmness and devotion to duty. I was present in court at the time, and heard what passed.

The grand jury had called up the subject in their room, and the late John Marshall, who happened to be a guest of Mr. Randolph, and heard the order at the time it was given to the slaves, was summoned to prove the offence.

He positively refused to answer, because (as he alleged) he was Mr. Randolph's guest, and that took place under such circumstances in his presence, was deemed sacred among gentlemen; and voluntarily to divulge it would be an act of dishonor, and in gross violation of the decency and proprieties of social intercourse. The grand jury said that they could not be governed by such considerations in the discharge of their legal duty.—Mr. Marshall still refusing to answer, the jury (Judge Leigh.) The Judge, without a moment's hesitation, announced that a guest, however unpleasant his situation might be, could claim no such privilege as that asserted by Mr. Marshall, and ordered him to answer.

Mr. Marshall returned to the jury-room, and about that time Mr. Randolph, in his English coach—a very clumsy vehicle, by the way, drawn by four blooded horses, drove rapidly into the village, and stopped immediately in front of the court-house. He came directly into the court-room, and took his seat in front of the bar between that and the jury bench, and almost immediately in front of the Judge. As he took his seat, Mr. Marshall, who had just come down from the jury-room, approached him. Mr. Randolph, in one of his peculiar half-whispers, which penetrated every portion of the court-room, and which was heard as plainly as if spoken in the loudest tone, said to him: "I understand I am to be presented, sir, and I have come to make my own defence." Mr. Marshall immediately replied that the matter had been dropped by the jury, and he would hear no more of it.

The remarks published by you were made not to the court or the grand jury, but privately to Mr. Marshall, and after the scene which I have described, to let him know the line of defence he had intended to pursue.

Mr. Marshall, when sent back to the jury with orders to convict, had then left the court, and ascertained that the act of each slave was a separate offence, and the penalty only $1.67, below the jurisdiction of the circuit court. The grand jury being satisfied, on reference to the statute, that they had no jurisdiction of the offence, abandoned the investigation, and thus the presentment was made.

The foreman of that jury, if my memory is not at fault, was Mr. E. W. Henry, and he is still alive—the last of the sons of Patrick Henry.

The county court of your and my native county, under the old and better regime of bygone days, when presided over by such men as Clement Carrington, Robert Morton, Martin Hancock, and many others of the same stamp, could not be bullied, even by Mr. Bouldin.

Yours truly, WOOD BOULDIN.

AN INGENIOUS theft was committed in Paris lately, the expense of a jeweler of that city. A well-dressed man, decorated, and having the appearance of a gentleman, entered this jeweler's store in the Rue Royale and asked to be shown some of his most valuable diamond rings, saying that he desired to present it to M. Jules Favre.

One was shown him of a value of several thousand francs, with which he expressed himself satisfied. He was then about to pay for it, when he suddenly discovered that he had "forgotten" his pocketbook at home. This, however, was a trick which could easily be remedied. Would the jeweler kindly take the box containing the ring to M. Favre's residence, and say that it is sent by his admirer to the gentleman? Then the gentleman handed the jeweler his card—a handsome affair with a coat-of-arms, and with the gentleman's address upon it—and begged the shop-man to call at his residence and receive his money. Then he left, and the jeweler took the box to M. Favre's house. M. Favre was absent, and the box was given to a servant. From M. Favre's servant he went to find the customer's residence. Of course he was unsuccessful in his search, and then, suspecting a trick, he hurried back to M. Favre's residence, to learn from the servant that immediately after his departure a stranger, having the appearance of a clerk, had called for the box, saying that it was sent to the house of M. Favre by mistake. The ring was given to the swindler, who thereupon took his departure.

THE "PASSION PLAY."—There are one or two of the interior villages of a portion of Germany where once in about ten years, amidst a rural and religious people, the whole history, life and death of the Saviour, with the attendant characters are depicted in what is called the "Passion Play." The population gathers into the village from the surrounding districts, remaining several days, through which the performance of the play extends. It is a curious and grave entertainment, and latterly has attracted the attention of travelers. The American visitors at the "Passion Play" at Oberammergau gave much offence to the simple villagers by going "behind the scenes" and paying court to the actresses. Through the influence of Judas Iscariot, who figured in the play, the privilege of flirting with the ladies was forbidden to visitors.

THE FOLLOWING WILL BE READ WITH INTEREST:
Under date of April 26th, 1871, Dr. HENRY
J. ROGERS, 68 Sharp street, Baltimore, an eminent physician, writes regarding

CRYSTAL DISCOVERY:
"It affords me much pleasure to bear testimony as to the efficacy of your Crystal Discovery. Some years since, while in India, I suffered from a severe fever peculiar to the country. On my recovery, a patch of hair on the left side of my head became perfectly white, without at all affecting the remainder. To remove this unsightly appearance, I had recourse to various preparations, both in Europe and in this country; they all had one great defect—they dyed the hair black. Now, with your Crystal Discovery, I can get the desired shade—the natural color of my hair being dark brown. I consider your Discovery the best preparation I know of."

Yours truly,
HENRY J. ROGERS.

Now as the fact becomes more patent every day that thevarious dirty and filthy preparations advertised as Renewers, Restoratives, &c., are but compounds of Sugar of Lead and Sulphur, and therefore should be shunned by all who value their health, it is scarcely a matter of surprise that the demand for NATTAN'S CRYSTAL DISCOVERY, admitted to be perfectly harmless, and yet accomplish all, and more, than the poisonous articles claim to do, should have increased so rapidly. It restores the color and growth of the hair positively in a few days; strengthens the roots, makes an excellent dressing, softening neither clothes nor scalp; and on the contrary, it gives the scalp a pure and cleanly look, removing all dandruff and scurf. It is the most economical preparation in use. Put up in large bottles, at one dollar.

THE SINGER STILL TRIUMPHANT.

In 1869 we sold 88,781 machines, and last year 127,639, being 41,000 more than any other machine. From this it will be seen that our rivals in trade have been left far behind us, and the popularity of what is known as our

NEW FAMILY MACHINE.
We are not so vain as to suppose that these large sales are due to superior business capacity so much as to the merits of the machine. One hundred and twenty are now in daily use in this city.
